CONVERSATION SERIES DISCUSSION GUIDE

As you listen to the Building Resilience Conversation Series think through the questions below. You can reflect and answer on your own, discuss with a peer, or bring the questions to a staff meeting to discuss with your whole staff.

1

What am I most surprised to have learned from this conversation? How does this new information fit within my experience as an advocate?

2

What have I heard during this conversation that confirms how I see advocacy? During this conversation, do I recognize survivors I have already worked with?

3

What advocacy skills seem most necessary to help adult survivors of childhood sexual abuse to navigate healing? Do I possess those skills?

4

When I interact with survivors, what from this conversation do I want to fold into my advocacy practice?

5

What are specific ways that I can use the information I learned in this episode to inform my individual advocacy practice or advocacy program?

6

What aspects of oppression or racism get in the way of the advocacy I provide to adult survivors of child sexual abuse? What do I need to un-learn? What support do I need?

7 Do these conversations bring up my own survivorship or the survivorship of those I love? What support do I need during or after I listen to the conversation series?

8 What organizational changes need to be made for me to provide the types of advocacy referenced in the conversation series?
